

Stacey Grealis

(EULAR & Centre for Arthritis Research in UCD)

Stacey believes that the patients and public voice should be at the heart of all healthcare, policy and research. She advocates for early diagnosis and access to medicines for patients and the progression of integrated and multidisciplinary approach to care. She promotes for the importance of self-management of chronic diseases and the move towards innovation and technology in improving health outcomes for patients on a National and European level.

Patient Involvement Experience

- EULAR Research Partner and member of the EULAR School of Rheumatology in the development of online educational programmes for patients.
- OMERACT Patient research partner and working group member.
- Committee member of the Centre for Arthritis Research in UCD, Patient Insight Partner and member of Rheum news team.
- Arthritis Ireland National advocacy working group.
- IPPOSI Patient Education Programme and EUPATI National Platform member.
- Patient stakeholder at the EMA on the Impact of EU data protection legislation on the secondary use of health data in the development, evaluation and supervision of medicines.

Areas of Interest

- Patient and Public Involvement in healthcare, policy & research.
- Research in the areas of Rheumatic Muscular Diseases (RMDs), Rare Diseases, Chronic Diseases and Co-mobilities.
- Self-management of chronic diseases.
- Medicines management.
- Integrated care.
- Digital Health - e-Health and m-Health systems.